As far as small scale industries sector is concerned, the banks take into account factors which, inter alia, include background and experience of the entrip-reneur, locational suitability of the project, availability of land and raw-material, arrangments for marketing of the product, requisite clearance from the concerned authorities and viability of the scheme. With regard to self-employment schemes, the entrepreneur has to satisfy the eligibility criteria laid down under the respective scheme in regard to age, family income, educational qualification etc. Selection of borrowers under various self-employment schemes is usually done by the banks in co-ordination with Government organisations like the District Rural Development Agency and the District Industries Centre.
